

Eight Hundred and Seven Officers and Enlisted Men In First Arizona Infantry

There were 807 officers and men in the old First Arizona Infantry, now a part of the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Infantry, at the time it was inducted into federal service August 5, 1917, according to official records on file in the office of Adjutant General Charles W. Harris. An additional 144 men were added after the first draft call, making a total of 951 men who actually took the federal oath as a part of "Arizona Own."

The entire personnel of the First Arizona, on August 5, 1917, is printed below. This list is not intended to give readers the names of men who will return to this state with the 158th Infantry, however. Replacements, transfers and commissions have resulted in many of the original members being lost to the infantry and, likewise, many new faces being added.

Members of the First Arizona Infantry who took the federal oath August 5, 1917, were:

Entrance of America Into War Caused Promotion to Officers of Regular Army

Below is printed a table giving the increase in rank of regular army officers for the emergency as of November 11, 1918. The figures have been worked out by the statistics branch of the general staff. The veterinary corps had the highest percentage of officers promoted and the dental corps the lowest, the last named corps not having had a single promotion according to this table:

Table with columns: Branch, Total, Average number of steps of promotion per officer, Percent of officers promoted. Rows include Coast Artillery, Veterinary Corps, Cavalry, Field Artillery, Judge Advocate General, Engineers, Infantry, General officers, Medical Corps, Dental Corps, Miscellaneous, and a breakdown by Grade from Major General to Second Lieutenant.

Membership of the Great War Veterans Association

Creation of a Great War Veterans association in Phoenix is an undertaking of gigantic proportions and consequently one wrought with numerous obstacles. Prior to the perfection of the present organization, individuals and groups of individuals attempted to formulate an organic service men into an association founded merely upon their own ideas and, in many instances, these personal ideas were tinged with socialist views if not bolshevism. In consequence, the first movements toward organization did not meet hearty response. In fact, the early meetings had a tendency to arouse the ire of many veteran service men. But these early meetings had the result of bringing together service men toward the end of perfecting an organization that should meet the best approval of all.

For Their Best Interests
The Great War Veterans association of Phoenix is the culmination of efforts attempted to organize. It is founded on the principles of loyalty, democracy and Americanism. It is, primarily, an organization designed to further the interest of ex-service men; to perpetuate the comradeships formed during the war and to pave the way for new friendships; to provide the men with lounging rooms and a general meeting place where they can gather and meet socially; to promote different athletic and social events; and to find employment for the ex-service man. Various problems and difficulties presented themselves when men interested began to formulate their plans for an organization founded on a true base but these were gradually overcome. Then the matter of furnishing club rooms presented itself but this was an obstacle that was quickly overcome through the splendid cooperation of business firms and individuals of this city.

Finding Employment
The association had to ask for whatever was needed and it was furnished forthwith. Magazines and periodicals of various kinds and descriptions were also supplied for the reading room while different musical instruments were donated. With hundreds of service men returning to their homes each week, the labor situation became more and more acute. Consequently the first big undertaking that presented itself to the G. W. V. Association was that of finding employment for the unemployed ex-service man. And there were hundreds of the same in Phoenix and the immediate vicinity. This work was undertaken in a systematic manner. First survey was started to determine the labor needs of the community. Then ex-service men were registered at the club headquarters, each man specifying the kind of work he preferred or could do.

In Athletics
In this manner, hundreds of ex-service men were not only found employment, but employers were given experienced help. It was a mutual benefit. This work is still progressing and always will be one of the special features of the association's activities. To continue the high physical standard of ex-service men, the association has appointed an athletic committee under whose direction athletic activities will play an important part in the club work. A baseball team has already been organized and a fine schedule prepared, while other forms of athletics will be taken up in season. Every member of the association is invited to participate in the various sporting events. At the present writing, the club is in an exceptionally healthy condition notwithstanding the fact that it has just recently completed the organization steps. Bigger and greater things are in store for the Great War Veterans' association of Phoenix.

A KLONDIKE IN SIBERIA

(From the American)
From time immemorial Siberia was known to Russians as the "Golden Bottom," and this not without a reason. The great gold placers scattered throughout Eastern Siberia tempted and attracted enterprising individuals for many centuries, through their richness and the ease with which they could be worked. Only the severity of the climate and lack of adequate transportation together with indifference on the part of the government prevented Siberian gold fields from becoming the greatest in the world. Alluvial gold was first found in the province of Eniseisk in 1830. Afterwards gold was discovered in great amounts throughout the whole province. The gold is found in many cases in the sand of rivers and small streams. The geological formation of these deposits varies, but in many cases show predominance of slate rocks. The thickness of gold-bearing strata varies in places from fourteen feet to twenty-one feet and the extent from five tenths to thirty-five miles. The proportion of gold is also different, according to the depth of the deposit. A thin layer of alluvium called "turk," usually covers the gold strata.

MEN VERSUS SHIPS

(Scientific American)
An outstanding lesson of Jellicoe's story of the grand fleet is that it is men, not material, that win battles. The supposed great superiority of the British fleet over the Germans in the North Sea simply did not exist, at least in the earlier stages of the war, when the German high seas fleet consisted of fifteen battleships and four battle cruisers, and the British grand fleet of seventeen battleships and five battle cruisers. The British excess in battleships was offset by the fact that Germany had between eighty and ninety destroyers to Great Britain's forty-two. These figures apply only to the North Sea, where the total German strength was concentrated and where a part only of the British fleet was present. Jinks—I hear your boy in college is opposed to the draft? Jenks—Well, he did say it would be handier if I sent him the cash.
